A DEGREE THAT OPENS DOORS

The Bachelor of Arts (BA) offers more than 30 study areas, available as majors and minors. You can build a degree that broadens your education and helps you to discover your true interests and potential, before entering the workforce or pursuing a graduate qualification.

The degree builds vital skills that can be applied to a wide range of careers and study pathways, while allowing you to follow your passion. As a Melbourne Arts student, you will build interdisciplinary knowledge, community leadership skills and cultural awareness, graduating with the skills necessary to succeed in the rapidly changing global workplace.

Overseas study options include student exchange at one of our prestigious partner universities and short-term overseas intensive subjects. You can also participate in accredited study overseas, and obtain vocational experience in community or professional organisations.

WHAT DO I STUDY?

The Bachelor of Arts requires the successful completion of 24 subjects – 300 points in total, with subjects usually worth 12.5 points each. You will complete eight subjects, or 100 points of study, in each of the three year levels.

First year

In the first year, you will complete at least one Arts Foundation subject from a choice of six. These subjects introduce central Arts concepts, ideas and principles to assist in your academic transition to the University, and enable you to make informed study choices for the remainder of your degree.

Second year

By the second year you will have a better understanding of the Arts disciplines offered and be able to finalise your selection of majors and minors. In the second year, you will complete the second-year subjects in your major/s.

Third year

In third year, you will have the opportunity to engage in a capstone experience, which is designed to draw together the various strands of your undergraduate study and prepare you for life as a graduate.

I'm convinced I made the right decision!

"When it came to VTAC Change of Preference, I was tossing up between studying a BA at the University of Melbourne and doing an Arts/Law degree at another university. For me it came down to Melbourne's world-renowned reputation, location and the flexibility it would afford me to spread my wings and try new things."

- ¹ This is a sample course plan only. Subjects offered may change from year to year. You will be advised of current subject offerings prior to subject selection and enrolment.
- ² You must complete at least four breadth subjects, plus another two subjects either as breadth or from your core studies. For details on breadth, see page 6.
- ³ Subject to Academic Board approval

BREADTH: BROADENING YOUR EMPLOYMENT PROSPECTS

Employers look for graduates who are adaptable and bring unique skills and knowledge to the workplace.

Through breadth, you can take subjects from outside your core study area. This allows you to:

- Develop your interests and discover new opportunities
- Pursue a skill or passion, such as music or law
- Learn to look at issues from a different angle
- Work with students from different courses and backgrounds – just as you would in the workplace.

Selecting your breadth subjects

Your breadth selection can be as broad or targeted as you like. There are more than 200 breadth subjects available to Arts students, including:

- Cities: From Local to Global
- Genetics and the Evolution of Life
- Global Health, Security and Sustainability
- Human Physiology
- Making Movies
- Managing and Leading Organisations
- Owning Ideas: Creation, Innovation and Law
- Wellbeing, Motivation and Performance
- World Music Choir.

You can choose to take a breadth track, which will help you select from the multitude of breadth subjects available. A breadth track is a set of three or more subjects that progressively develops knowledge and skills relevant to a particular theme, topic or issue.

Following are some of the breadth tracks available to Bachelor of Arts students (note that some breadth tracks may have additional prerequisites):

- Climate Change
- Data Analysis
- Doing Business in Asia
- Feeding the World's Population
- Greening Urban Landscapes
- Law – Corporate and Business Law
- Marketing Communications and Branding
- Music, Mind and Wellbeing
- People and Environment
- Popular Music
- Wine and Food
- Your Money or Your Life
- Youth, Citizenship and Identity.

ARTS FOUNDATION SUBJECTS

The Faculty of Arts has developed six first-year foundation subjects, which offer cross-cultural perspectives on a number of historical and contemporary themes.

These subjects are designed to:

- Introduce you to core ideas across a wide range of study areas, and different ways of understanding complex issues
- Assist you in making an informed decision about your specialisation or major
- Provide you with the essential skills and resources for further study
- Help you improve your skills in research, planning and communication.

You must complete at least one Arts Foundation subject, preferably in the first semester of your degree.

You can choose from the following subjects:

- Aboriginalities
- Identity
- Language
- Power
- Reason
- Representation.

CAPSTONE SUBJECTS

Capstone subjects, taken in the final year of your degree, incorporate an activity or experience, including an examination or research project, which requires you to consider broader themes relevant to your discipline.

INTERNSHIPS

Arts internship subject

This unique subject allows you to gain real-world experience at a leading organisation. Through your 80-hour work placement and written assessment, you'll have the chance to apply your university learnings to practical situations, and make valuable connections with employers. You will also learn more about the types of roles available after graduation, which will help you make future career decisions.

Community Volunteering for Change

This subject gives you the opportunity to broaden your academic experience by getting involved in community volunteering projects and work placements. You will spend the equivalent of around one day per week (80 hours minimum) during semester as an intern in a not-for-profit organisation. This gives you the opportunity to apply knowledge and skills acquired during your course to address issues of significance to the community.

Discipline-specific internship subjects

Specific internships are available to students studying majors in Criminology, Sociology, and Politics and International Studies. Places are limited and are usually awarded to high achievers.

Criminology and Sociology internships:

- Sociology Internship
- Socio-legal studies workplace visits
- Law, Justice and Social Change

Politics and International Studies internships:

- Parliamentary Internship
- Public Affairs Internship
- Uni-Capitol Washington Congress Internship

FIELDWORK SUBJECT

Our Arts fieldwork subject, On Country Learning: Indigenous Studies, enables you to go into a real research environment in the field and gain valuable skills and training. You can take this subject if you're studying Politics and International Studies or Australian Indigenous Studies.

OVERSEAS INTENSIVE SUBJECTS

These subjects give you an amazing opportunity to study in another country, and gain an international perspective and a competitive edge. If you're studying a language, immersing yourself in a new culture can dramatically improve your language skills.

Places are limited and can often be competitive.

Art History travel subjects:

- Art Fieldwork
- Contemporary Culture (available as part of fourth-year honours)

History travel subjects:

- The Graeco-Roman City in Antiquity
- Venice Cultures of Consumption

China travel subject:

- Intensive Chinese Program: China

Italy travel subjects:

- Contemporary Italy: Study Abroad
- The Story of Italian: Study Abroad

France travel subject:

- Paris: Ville Lumiere (on site in Paris)

Down and dirty with practical summer archaeology

Want to become an archaeologist? You'll need to learn some hands-on skills such as surveying, excavation and artefact analysis. That's where the summer intensive subject 'Practical Archaeology' comes in. It gives you a chance to get your hands dirty on a real-life dig site at a historic homestead in Melbourne, and will introduce you to some of the fieldwork, scientific and interpretative methods involved in working as an archaeologist.

The subject was developed in collaboration with professional consulting archaeologists and heritage agencies, as well as representatives from Aboriginal Affairs Victoria and Heritage Victoria.

A career with a difference

Melbourne Arts graduates enjoy challenging and rewarding careers in a diverse range of industries, both locally and abroad.

WORKPLACE SKILLS

Our graduates find that studying a range of disciplines across their Arts degree equips them with flexible thinking skills and opens up an array of career opportunities. Each major will give you specialised skills in a certain discipline or field, but all our majors will give you the following skills and attributes essential in the workplace:

- Problem-solving skills – applicable in the workplace for issues management, consultancy, planning, people management and diplomacy
- Excellent written and oral communication skills – vital for any position of leadership, influence or innovation
- Analytical and planning skills and knowledge – necessary for any role that requires planning, risk management or project management
- Understanding of cultural diversity – important for careers in international relations, community development, translating and diplomacy
- Ability to think creatively and innovatively – essential for roles in marketing and advertising, logistics, publishing and editing, consultancy and planning
- Ethical leadership skills.

PATHWAYS TO GRADUATE STUDY

Bachelor of Arts graduates can complete further study at graduate level, through coursework or research programs.

Programs at the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences allow students to develop advanced knowledge in a selected discipline and acquire professional skills for a rewarding and meaningful career. Specialised programs are also offered by other graduate schools at the University of Melbourne.

A moment with Tracy Sun, Editor of 588 Magazine

The application process for the key position at Melbourne's largest Chinese language magazine was highly competitive, but Arts alumni Tracy Sun felt prepared. During her degree she focused on getting her work published, even though she usually wasn't paid for her time, which meant she could demonstrate experience and enthusiasm during her interview.

"During my studies I was head of the Chinese Publisher's Group at the University, and helped to make a magazine with fellow students. I also worked at Australian Chinese Daily," she said.

Tracy believes students should use their time at university to find out what they enjoy and to work out their own identity – one that is unique and will help them find a place in the competitive job market.

Arts majors

A major is a group of subjects within a particular study area. You can choose up to two majors as the focus of your degree. Read more about the majors available on the following pages.

ANCIENT WORLD STUDIES

Ancient World Studies is the study of Classical Greece and Rome, as well as Egypt and the Near East, from 3000 BCE to the 4th century CE. You can choose a variety of subject streams, which combine the study of ancient languages and texts in translation (such as myth, literature, history and philosophy) with the study of archaeology, art and architectural monuments. You can focus on a particular time period, geographic region, technical specialisation (such as myth or ceramics) or thematic area of study.

Career paths include archaeology, classics teaching, curatorship, tourism, librarianship and archival work, and academic research.

ANTHROPOLOGY

Anthropology is the study of the many societies and cultures of the world and their complex interaction. Anthropology's global scope is complemented by a local focus, and a unique perspective gained by participation in the daily life and language of the communities studied. Contemporary social anthropology asks broad and detailed questions about what it means to be human in a globalised world, as well as providing a critical vantage point from which to reflect on ourselves and others.

Career paths include archaeology, history, academia, sociology, government and consultancy.

ARABIC

The Arabic program offers an integrated way of studying Arabic language and aspects of Arab and Islamic culture. Beyond studying the language itself, you also have the opportunity to learn about the nature of living, seeing, acting and interacting in the 'Arab way'. You will develop language proficiency, as well as awareness of issues related to Arabic literature, history, sociology and religion.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

ART HISTORY

The University of Melbourne is the premier provider of art history education in Australia. Thematic and interdisciplinary subjects deal with the theories of art history, art and the market, prints and other issues. Areas of specialisation include late antiquity, medieval, renaissance, baroque, 18th and 19th century European art, modernism and postmodernism, contemporary art, Indigenous Australian art and international art.

Career paths include art curatorship, arts promotion, arts management, history, arts policy and communications.

ASIAN STUDIES

Knowledge of Asia is a crucial asset at this time of rapid globalisation and social change. Our Asian Studies program is one of the largest in Australia and comprises a comprehensive range of subjects in the intellectual, cultural, political and religious traditions of Asia, with a focus on China, Indonesia, Japan and South East Asia. Asian Studies subjects are taught in English and do not require language prerequisites. Study abroad programs and opportunities to participate in events and activities with an Asian focus are available.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, communications and government.

See the course plan on page 5.

AUSTRALIAN INDIGENOUS STUDIES

The Australian Indigenous Studies major offers unique perspectives on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander histories and culture. Themes include Indigenous cultural production, key thinkers and concepts, settler and Indigenous environmental ethics, Aboriginal women and colonialism, Indigenous health, and issues relating to land, law and philosophy.

Career paths include community development, policy, sociology and government.

CHINESE

Learn to speak one of the most important languages in the world. By taking Chinese language you can learn about the history and contemporary culture of one of Australia's most important trade and cultural partners. As a Chinese speaker you would become eligible for many new emerging employment opportunities. You will be placed in an appropriate class level according to your ability and background in the language.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

CLASSICS

In this major, you will study the languages of Ancient Greek and Latin, exploring ancient culture through the literature of ancient Greece and Rome in the original languages. You will progress through one or both of these languages from beginner through to advanced levels.

Career paths include teaching and academia, government, policy development, public service, librarianship and archival work, and heritage consultancy.

#1 in Victoria

#13 in the world

For English Language and Literature

QS World University Rankings by Subject 2013

CREATIVE WRITING

This major lets you explore your creative potential and extend your work to avant-garde, cross-genre and experimental forms of writing. You will critically test the creative potential and influence of contemporary theoretical and philosophical schools of thought in all forms of writing. Areas of specialisation include fiction, poetry, poetics, non-fiction, performance and writing for theatre, and autobiography. Teachers in the creative writing program include award-winning writers.

Career paths include writing, publishing, editing, corporate communications and marketing.

CRIMINOLOGY

Criminology is the study of human behaviour and explores the motivations behind criminal activities. It draws knowledge and perspectives from a range of disciplines such as law, sociology, psychology, psychiatry and history. Criminologists work in a wide range of fields including policy, crime prevention, corporate and white-collar crime, business regulation, drug policy and consumer and environmental protection. Increasingly, criminologists also study the ways cultures depict crime, whether in newspapers, television and other mass media or in films, novels and art.

Career paths include legal advising, policing, policy development, sociology, defence and government.

ECONOMICS

Economics is essential to modern life, because it seeks to understand, assess and explain the mechanisms of markets and national economies. The Economics major builds problem-solving skills that are applicable to careers in business and government. It will teach you how to analyse and interpret data and equip you with the tools to find smart solutions for the numerous problems confronting governments and the commercial world. Three areas of study are available within the main discipline: microeconomics, macroeconomics and econometrics, and quantitative methods. Students who wish to pursue a major in Economics through the Bachelor of Arts degree are required to meet the maths prerequisites as determined by the Faculty of Business and Economics. See page 22 for more details.

Career paths include human resources, project management, marketing and communications, management and consultancy.

ENGLISH AND THEATRE STUDIES

English and Theatre Studies is a combined program, and you can specialise in either area. It offers studies in imaginative writing and dramatic performance, focusing on their forms and traditions, and on the myriad ways they engage with the everyday world. The program offers subjects in a wide range of fields, from the medieval to romanticism, modernism, postmodernism and beyond. This includes British, Australian, American and postcolonial writing and theatre, and literary, cultural and performance theory.

Career paths include authorship, publishing, arts management, corporate communications, cinema management, and marketing.

FRENCH

French is one of the world's major international languages. It is spoken by over 200 million people in 43 countries, on five continents. A knowledge of French may increase access to careers in international relations, development studies, business, science and the arts. The overall objective of the French program is to teach you to process information from a wide variety of materials in French, both written and spoken, and to produce accounts and discussions of that information in a variety of forms.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

An abundance of options!

"I'm glad to be at university because my social horizons have expanded a lot and I have gained more independence in the academic system. I like being able to choose subjects I like and to set my timetable instead of having it set out for me."

■ Major subjects: Media and Communications ■ Elective subjects ■ Breadth subjects²

- ¹ This is a sample course plan only. Subjects offered may change from year to year. You will be advised of current subject offerings prior to subject selection and enrolment.
- ² Due to the structure of the Economics major, six subjects must be allocated to the breadth component of the degree.

GENDER STUDIES

Gender Studies considers the effect of gender and sexuality on a range of discourses embedded within cultures, identities and global histories. Graduates possess exceptional skills in creative and critical thinking, textual and visual analysis, and writing and communication. The training you will receive in the role of gender in everyday life and in global cultures also provides crucial preparation for dealing with the gendered nature of the workplace. Subjects consider ideas about sexual difference, sexual politics and sexuality through close engagement with a broad variety of theorists, case studies and media.

Career pathways include sociology, community development, policy development, government, academia and research.

GEOGRAPHY

Geography examines the dynamic relationships between societies and environments. It is a globally focused discipline that seeks to understand the complex connections between people and place in order to work towards a more equitable world. Field classes in Australia and overseas offer students the opportunity to explore and examine geographical issues and problems first hand.

Career paths include consulting, policy, biodiversity conservation, climate change mitigation and adaptation, disaster risk management, international development, natural resource management, rural and urban planning, and sustainable urban development.

GERMAN

German has more than 100 million native speakers and is one of the most popular languages worldwide. A knowledge of German opens up the rich culture of German-speaking Europe as well as its history, philosophy, literature, music and scientific traditions. The German program has a proud history of more than half a century at the University and provides the opportunity to complete part of your studies overseas through scholarships and exchange programs. You will be placed in an appropriate class level according to your ability and background in the language.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

HEBREW AND JEWISH STUDIES

The Hebrew and Jewish Studies program offers an unparalleled opportunity to study the development of Jewish civilisation, Israeli history and culture, and the Hebrew language. The Hebrew and Jewish Studies program investigates the history, literature, archaeology, philosophy, ethnography and social theory of Jewish society and culture. You will engage in contemporary debates about ethnicity and identity, assimilation, exile and Diaspora cultures.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, teaching, and religious and community work.

HISTORY

The History curriculum offers you the opportunity to understand the worlds of the past, to reflect on the making of the present, and to develop the capacities to locate information, analyse evidence, think critically and communicate effectively. The discipline offers both great range and detailed attention to particular places, times and themes. Courses extend from the medieval world to the great empires, to our most immediate past. All offerings reflect the latest developments in historical research and vocational practice.

Career paths include teaching and academia, government, policy development, public service, librarianship and archival work, and heritage consultancy.

See the course plan on page 5.

HISTORY AND PHILOSOPHY OF SCIENCE

The aim of History and Philosophy of Science is to understand science – how it works, its historical development and its function in modern society. History and Philosophy of Science integrates philosophical, historical and sociological approaches to the study of science. You will gain analytical skills in evaluating scientific (and non-scientific) knowledge as well as a broad understanding of the historical development of science in its interactions with philosophy, religion and society.

Career paths include history, sociology, government, teaching, academia and research.

An agent for positive change

"The highlight for me was studying cultural geography, which goes into the philosophy of how and why humans interact with the environment. Since graduating I have founded Polykala, a not-for-profit social enterprise that delivers training to newly arrived asylum seekers, refugees and migrants on environmental awareness, community leadership and youth empowerment."

INDONESIAN

Learn the language of one of Australia's closest neighbours. By learning Indonesian you will open up many interesting employment opportunities in Indonesia and with the many organisations who work with the country's population of over 200 million, including the Australian Government. You will be placed in an appropriate class level according to your ability and background in the language.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

ISLAMIC STUDIES

Islam is one of the fastest-growing religions in the world, embraced by around one-fifth of the world's population. Through the Islamic Studies program, you will study the development of Islamic thought and Muslim societies from a broad multidisciplinary perspective. Islamic Studies addresses the issues relevant to the development of Islam as a religion and civilisation from its origins to the present.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, communications, government and policy development.

ITALIAN

Study Italian language and culture in one of Australia's leading Italian language programs. Learn the language of a culturally rich country to help with your own travel, and learn how Italy has influenced Australian art, food and lifestyle. You will be placed in an appropriate class level according to your ability and background in the language.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

JAPANESE

Our Japanese program is one of the largest in Australia. The language subjects, taught at a range of levels from beginner to advanced, are designed to maximise acquisition of the language and to develop your communication skills in various types of texts, interactional contexts and strategic aspects of meaning-making. You will also develop a broad understanding of cultural, social and historical aspects of Japan.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

LINGUISTICS AND APPLIED LINGUISTICS

Linguistics is the study of language in all its aspects, including its structure, its diversity, how it changes and evolves, how people learn and make use of it to communicate, and how it is implicated in relations of power. This major will give you an insight into the most fundamental of all human faculties, developing strong analytical skills and a foundation for work in diverse areas.

Career paths include translation, teaching, language assessment, research, communications and consultancy.

See the course plan on page 13.

MEDIA AND COMMUNICATIONS

The study of Media and Communications offers you foundational knowledge for the 21st century. It equips you with a critical understanding of the constantly changing global media environments and technologies, and provides core research and professional skills valued across a range of media sectors. A wide array of subjects is available, covering key developments in media industries and new communication technologies, and their effect on politics, society and culture.

Career paths include journalism, publishing, public relations, marketing, communications and media management.

PHILOSOPHY

Philosophy is the study of the most fundamental aspects of reality and value. Every area of inquiry and endeavour – from art and history through politics and economics to biology and mathematics – generates philosophical issues about our world and our place in it. Work in philosophy involves the creative, critical task of constructing, clarifying and comparing ideas. We dig into the fundamental assumptions beneath our everyday views, to see how they hang together, how they can be improved, or how we might have reason to prefer one over another.

Career paths include analysis and research, policy development, education and training, ethics, communications and academia.

See the course plan on page 5.

POLITICS AND INTERNATIONAL STUDIES

The Politics and International Studies major gives you an understanding of the main political issues, institutions, ideas and actors that dominate the local, national and international agenda. It explores the relationships between countries and regions, and the international system as a whole. The wide range of issues and topics covered includes globalisation, regionalism, environmental politics, American power and diplomacy, and international relations.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, multinational business, politics, policy development and government.

Studying relevant, real-world topics

"Choosing to specialise in Media and Communications came as a result of my natural affinity for writing and a fascination with how new technologies and media coverage affect our lives."

Year 3	Semester 1	Research Methods for Human Inquiry	Semantics	First Language Acquisition	Arts Internship
	Semester 2	Psychological Science: Theory and Practice	Advanced Studies of Human Cognition	Exploring Linguistics Diversity (capstone)	The Psychopathology of Everyday Life

■ Arts Foundation subjects ■ Major subjects: Psychology
■ Major subjects: Linguistics and Applied Linguistics ■ Elective subjects ■ Breadth subjects ②

- ① This is a sample course plan only. Subjects offered may change from year to year. You will be advised of current subject offerings prior to subject selection and enrolment.
- ② You must complete at least four breadth subjects, plus another two subjects either as breadth or from your core studies. For details on breadth, see page 6.

PSYCHOLOGY

Taught at the University since the late 1800s, psychology is intellectually fascinating and has direct applications to everyday life. As a discipline, it embraces a wide range of perspectives and approaches that contribute to the scientific study and understanding of behaviour, especially human behaviour.

If you would like to work as a registered psychologist in Australia you will need to complete the Australian Psychology Accreditation Council (APAC)-accredited major sequence, as illustrated in the sample course plan. This leads to further study, after which you can become an accredited psychologist. To complete an accredited major, you must complete 10 subjects, including two as breadth.

Career paths include psychology practice, community health, government and human behaviour.

RUSSIAN

Russia is and will continue to be one of the world's largest political powers. Speakers of Russian can better understand the place of this rich and diverse country and where it is placed in politics, economics and culture. You will be placed in an appropriate class level according to your ability and background in the language.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

SCREEN AND CULTURAL STUDIES

This major embraces a wide range of material: film and popular media; screen histories; Australian, Hollywood and arthouse cinemas; everyday life; television and entertainment; ethnographic and documentary cinema; computer games; the internet; and the representation of global cultures. It offers subjects about the nature and history of film and cultural studies. These include such issues as film and screen aesthetics, identity and gender, sexuality and spectatorship, the nature of narrative structures and class ideologies.

Career paths include art curatorship, sociology, government and academia.

SOCIOLOGY

Sociology explores issues related to contemporary families, gender relations, ethnic, racial and sexual identity, and the body, through to media, new technologies and globalisation. You will learn about patterns of social inequality and new forms of social problems, and the ways in which people and societies confront these new challenges.

Career paths include sociology, community development, policy development, government, academia and research.

SPANISH AND LATIN AMERICAN STUDIES

As a student of Spanish, you will learn to speak the language of more than 25 countries and 350 million people. Subjects cover the culture and histories of the largest Spanish-speaking nations and how the language has influenced cultures around the world. By learning such a popular and influential language, you will create a wide range of new career opportunities. Exchange opportunities in Spanish-speaking countries are available.

Career paths include international relations, diplomacy, community development, translation, communications and government.

Arts minors

A minor is a group of subjects within a particular study area, and is taken alongside your major.

Any of the majors listed on pages 9–14 can be studied as minors, as well as the disciplines outlined below (which are available only as minors).

CHINESE STUDIES

The Chinese Studies minor focuses on the cultural, political and religious traditions of China.

DEVELOPMENT STUDIES

Development Studies addresses processes of social, economic, political and cultural change in the global south. This minor allows you to critically examine processes of managed change in the developing world, giving you the skills to intervene in such processes. Through this program, you will better understand the nature of policies and relationships at local, national and international levels that have shaped poverty, inequality and insecurity in the contemporary world. We examine themes such as debt and global poverty, environmental sustainability, the relationship between citizens and the state, culture and human rights, globalisation, national sovereignty, gender inequity, social exclusion, health and migration.

See the course plan on page 5.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE STUDIES

English Language Studies enhances effective use of the most widely used language in the world. You will develop an understanding of the history of English, its subtle and intricate grammar, and the status of its many social and geographical varieties.

ENVIRONMENTAL STUDIES

This versatile minor enables you to gain practical and relevant experience through laboratory work, group projects and field trips, including opportunities for fieldwork research in China. Environmental Studies combines knowledge of natural environments with an understanding of how human societies work. It analyses environmental management, biogeography and sustainability.

EUROPEAN STUDIES

European Studies is a cross-disciplinary program that looks at European culture, society and languages. You will complete core European Studies subjects and can also take subjects from areas such as history, literary studies, languages, philosophy, politics and art history.

KNOWLEDGE AND LEARNING¹

The Knowledge and Learning minor allows you to examine the ways in which differing forms of knowledge are constructed, produced, managed and disseminated. You will discover the learning processes that support this in a range of social, historical and political contexts.

LAW AND JUSTICE

In this minor you will examine the capacity and power of law to deliver justice in a range of social, historical and political contexts. A key focus is the origins and effects of law's processes.

SOCIAL THEORY

Social Theory analyses the organisation and transformations of societies and cultures. It questions the everyday assumptions that shape our lives and considers such issues as the division of power and the nature of identity.

Opened my eyes to different options

“Not knowing exactly what I want to do as a career meant the University of Melbourne suited me best as I could try out lots of different subjects while maintaining a focus on Psychology with the possibility of graduate studies.”

Honours

An honours year will help you develop research and analytical skills, and is a great way to prepare for work or further study.

 ba.unimelb.edu.au/pathways/honours.html

Honours is a fourth year of study taken on completion of your undergraduate degree. It brings together the theory and practical skills gained in your bachelors degree, and allows you to develop advanced skills in:

- Research
- Analysis
- Problem solving
- Critical and creative thinking
- Communication.

The main component of your honours year is the completion of an independent research thesis under the guidance of an academic supervisor.

CAREER OUTCOMES

Honours improves future career prospects and opens up a broad range of opportunities. Honours graduates are in high demand from employers because of their outstanding research, analytical and communication skills and proven ability to undertake complex, demanding projects independently.

A PATHWAY TO FURTHER STUDY

The honours year is also a pathway to graduate study in humanities, social sciences and other areas.

Honours is usually equivalent to the first year of masters by coursework study in the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences. Students who have completed study in an equivalent discipline may be eligible to complete a related masters by coursework program within one year.

High achievement in honours can allow you direct entry into a research Master of Arts or a Doctor of Philosophy (PhD).

ELIGIBILITY FOR HONOURS

To be eligible for entry into the honours program, you must have:

- A Bachelor of Arts from the University of Melbourne, or an equivalent undergraduate degree from another institution, completed within the last five years, with a standard Grade Point Average (GPA) of at least 70 per cent, or equivalent; and
- Completed a major at an appropriate standard in a discipline relevant to the specific program you are applying for; and
- Achieved sufficient results in any prerequisite subjects for the specific program you are applying for.

Requirements for each area of study are available in the University Handbook:

 handbook.unimelb.edu.au

Honours as a pathway to a PhD and beyond!

"I applied for this job because it was a great fit due to my academic and personal interests, and the connection back to Australia was quite important. I look after the Australian Studies centres across China so it is useful to have an academic background in Australian studies. I've always had a personal interest in culture and the arts, so it's enjoyable to have this opportunity to engage with artists and the cultural scene."

Bachelor of Arts (Extended)

This specialised program provides opportunities for talented Indigenous Australians to study Victoria's most popular degree.¹

The Bachelor of Arts (Extended) has been developed specifically for Indigenous Australians. It is a four-year degree with integrated support and academic skills subjects to ensure your success in our Arts program. It provides opportunities for those who may not obtain the results required for entry into the Bachelor of Arts.

You will benefit from targeted support and mentoring, and live on campus in one of the University's residential colleges.

In first year, you will complete six academic skills (bridging) subjects, which are designed to build your academic skills, confidence in preparing and presenting your ideas, leadership potential and teamwork. You will also take two Arts Foundation subjects together with other Bachelor of Arts students.

Second year includes one further academic skills subject. You can then choose your remaining units in second, third and fourth years as per the regular Bachelor of Arts.

ELIGIBILITY

Applicants to the Bachelor of Arts (Extended) must be of Aboriginal or Torres Strait Islander descent and have completed a Victorian Certificate of Education or interstate equivalent qualification. Non-school leavers, mature-age students and alternative pathway applications will be considered.

Successful students will be selected on their likelihood to succeed in the Bachelor of Arts. Qualifications will be assessed on application.

Diploma in Languages

Through the Diploma in Languages, you can gain a language qualification in addition to your degree, increasing your skills, employability and international work opportunities.

 ba.unimelb.edu.au/enrich/diplomas.html

The Diploma in Languages allows you to focus on your chosen degree, without missing out on the opportunity to improve your competitiveness in the global career market with a language qualification. Whether you are seeking to improve your existing language skills or have no previous language training, the Diploma in Languages opens up a world of opportunities.

The languages available are:

- Ancient Greek
- Arabic
- Chinese
- French
- German
- Hebrew
- Indonesian
- Italian
- Japanese
- Latin
- Russian
- Spanish.

Domestic students may be eligible to receive the final half of the diploma free from tuition fees.

Available to:

Students enrolled in Arts, Biomedicine, Commerce, Environments, Music and Science.

Prerequisites

There are no additional prerequisite requirements once you are enrolled in your undergraduate degree.

WHEN TO BEGIN

You can commence the diploma at the same time as your undergraduate degree, or at second or third-year level. If you enrol from first year you will complete 100 points of study (eight subjects) in addition to your degree program. Discuss your options with a course adviser when commencing your undergraduate degree.

The diploma can only be awarded upon completion of the degree.

DURATION

The diploma will generally add an extra year of full-time study to your degree. However, fast-track opportunities are available.

¹ This course is not registered on the Commonwealth Register of Institutions and Courses for Overseas Students (CRICOS) and cannot be offered to international students who require a student visa to study in Australia.

Graduate study

Completing a graduate qualification after your bachelors degree will set you up to become a leader in your field, and open up a wide range of career opportunities and increased earning potential.

The University of Melbourne offers professional qualifications at masters level through our prestigious graduate schools. Our graduate programs offer intensive, focused study and professional knowledge – making you 'job ready' and preparing you for professional employment in Australia and abroad.

Designed with the needs of internationally mobile graduates in mind, these qualifications are endorsed by the Australian Government as pathways to professional employment in Australia. Many are also recognised by professional bodies around the world.

On graduation, you'll be awarded a masters qualification in your chosen field. This is a higher level of qualification than you would gain studying a 'double' or 'combined' undergraduate bachelors degree at another university.

GRADUATE STUDY IN THE FACULTY OF ARTS

If you'd like to develop advanced skills in a specific area after completing your Bachelor of Arts, a graduate qualification from the Graduate School of Humanities and Social Sciences or the Melbourne School of Government could be the ideal choice.

The programs offered help you explore, question and develop ideas and theories, and foster your talents, passion and creativity. They give you the skills to interpret and deal with real-world situations and make a positive contribution to the world.

Renowned academics teach programs in cultural management, media, communications and publishing, the social sciences, government and more.

MELBOURNE SCHOOL OF GOVERNMENT

The Melbourne School of Government brings together academics, politicians, industry leaders and civil society organisations, and draws on their combined expertise and leadership to improve public decision-making, build stronger institutions and find actionable solutions to political and policy challenges.

The school offers graduate coursework and research programs in:

- Development Studies
- International Relations
- Public Policy and Management.

This scholarship enables a student studying Chinese at the University of Melbourne to complete a period of short intensive study in China through the Intensive Chinese Program: China.

Shakespeare Scholarship

The Shakespeare Scholarship is awarded to the student who submits the best 4000–5000 word essay on Shakespeare, as judged by the board of examiners. The English department, in the School of Culture and Communication, administers the scholarship.

Miltiades and Alkistis Chryssavgis Scholarship

This is an annual scholarship awarded to a first-year student commencing the Bachelor of Arts.

Access Melbourne

If you are a domestic student, you can enhance your opportunity for selection by applying for Access Melbourne, the University's special entry scheme.

Access Melbourne can help you gain a place in a course, even if your ATAR is below the Clearly-in Rank, by letting you explain the ongoing circumstances that have affected your education. Scholarships are also available.
